

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
OFFICE OF LEGISLATION AND CONGRESSIONAL AFFAIRS

November 25, 2014

Honorable Tom Harkin
Chairman, Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies
Committee on Appropriations
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

In the joint explanatory statement in the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2014 (Public Law 113-76), Congress directed the Department of Education (the Department) to submit a report to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees on enrollment and graduation information for Federal Pell Grant (Pell Grant) recipients for the 2012-2013 Pell Grant Award Year. This letter and its attachments provide that information. Copies of the report are being provided to the Chairman and Ranking Member of both the Senate and House Appropriations Subcommittees on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies along with the Chairman of both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees.

As noted in the joint explanatory statement, the Department's National Student Loan Data System (NSLDS) does not, at this time, have detailed enrollment and graduation information for all Pell Grant recipients. NSLDS does not contain complete enrollment information for all Pell Grant recipients because the original intent of NSLDS enrollment reporting was to determine when a student loan borrower should be moved between in-school, grace, or repayment status. Prior to 2012, institutions reported enrollment information for students who received federal student loans, but did not report information for students who received only a Pell Grant. However, approximately 70 percent of Pell Grant recipients also receive student loans.

The Department is currently working to ensure we have reliable data on Pell Grant-only recipients. Following the enactment of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2012, which reduced the lifetime eligibility limit for Pell Grants, the Department issued an Electronic Announcement in August 2012 providing additional guidance to institutions regarding reporting enrollment data on Pell-only recipients to NSLDS.<sup>1</sup> In addition, following the enactment of the Moving Ahead for Progress in the 21st Century (MAP-21) Act, which limited new borrowers' eligibility for subsidized loans to 150 percent of their program length, the Department issued a Dear Colleague Letter (GEN-14-07) in April 2014 advising institutions of significant changes to the NSLDS enrollment reporting process.<sup>2</sup>

The Department of Education's mission is to promote student achievement and preparation for global competitiveness by fostering educational excellence and ensuring equal access.

In addition to the limitations noted above, while NSLDS has information related to the institution at which a Pell Grant recipient first enrolled, it does not have information on the degree or credential sought by each recipient. For example, while most students who began attendance at a four-year institution intended to complete a bachelor's degree, there are some students whose initial enrollment was in a program of less-than-four years that was offered by the four-year institution (e.g., a two-year certificate program). Again, following the publication of GEN-14-07, institutions began reporting program specific information to NSLDS.

Graduation Calculation

Understanding the limitations of the current reporting system, and in an effort to be responsive to the request for information from the Committees, for this report the Department created four cohorts of Pell Grant recipients using the data available. The cohorts include only students for whom enrollment data was available in NSLDS, and are identified by the award year (July 1 to June 30) in which we have information that each recipient first enrolled as a first-time undergraduate student in an eligible postsecondary institution, regardless of the year in which the recipient first received a Pell Grant. For example, a student who first enrolled as an undergraduate student in 2007-2008, but who did not receive a Pell Grant until the 2008-2009 award year, would be included in the 2007-2008 cohort.

The numbers of those first-year Pell Grant recipients are the denominators for each of the relevant award year's graduation rate calculation. The numerators are the cumulative numbers of recipients from the denominators of each cohort who graduated through the cohort's subsequent award years, up to 2012-2013. Because six years represents 150 percent of normal time to completion for a student enrolled in a bachelor's degree program, the first cohort year was 2007-2008 with the six-year period ending with the 2012-2013 award year. We calculated separate graduation rates for each of the subsequent cohorts using the same methodology.<sup>3</sup>

Because of the limited data available regarding the type of degree or credential being sought by the student, the data provided in the attached tables were based on the type of institution in which the student first enrolled and not on the student's educational objective. Therefore, we make assumptions and present the data on the basis of whether the student's first enrollment was at a four-year institution or at a less-than-four-year institution.

For Pell Grant recipients who first began attendance at a four-year institution, we present the results in two separate tables. Table 1-A presents information on students who began at a four-year institution and graduated from any four-year institution. Table 1-B presents information on students who began at a four-year institution and graduated from any institution, including both four-year and less-than-four-year institutions.

<sup>3</sup> Note that for more recent cohorts insufficient time has passed to calculate a 6-year graduation rate.

Table 2 presents information on students who first began at a less-than-four-year institution and graduated from any institution, including both four-year and less-than-four-year institutions.

Limitations

Incomplete Enrollment Information

As noted, approximately 70 percent of Pell Grant recipients also received student loans. Thus, the data presented in the attached tables is based on the enrollment and graduation for approximately 70 percent of Pell Grant recipients.

Inaccurate Enrollment Information

Some institutions (or their third-party servicers) reported a student as having withdrawn even though the student completed his or her program. Institutions may have reported the data in this way because it allowed them to update a student's enrollment status prior to confirming that the student graduated. For the purposes of managing the student loan program, a withdrawal or a graduation resulted in the same action (conversion of the loan). In 2012, however, the Department instructed institutions to report a student as having graduated when the student completed his or her program, even if the student was initially reported as having withdrawn.<sup>4</sup>

Also, prior to 2012, enrollment reporting instructions provided that when a student was continuously enrolled (e.g., undergraduate enrollment to graduate enrollment), the institution need not report the student as having graduated, just continuously enrolled. This is because the student's continued enrollment would prevent the loans from being converted to grace and repayment status. However, it would also "mask" the student's completion of his or her undergraduate program.

Because of the limitations discussed above, until data are provided using the new reporting directives, the number of Pell Grant recipients who completed their program will be underreported, resulting in lower reported graduation rates.

Institutional Level Graduation Information Limitations

As noted, the information provided in the attached tables includes only aggregate Pell Grant graduation cohort data. The data in the tables also denote whether the student first enrolled as an undergraduate at a four-year or less-than-four-year institution. The data do not include information on an institution-by-institution basis. It is important to note that under section 485(a)(7) of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended (HEA), as implemented in the Department's regulations at 34 CFR 668.45(a)(6), each institution is required to calculate and disclose graduation rates for designated groups of students, including rates for its Pell Grant recipients. Under the regulations, while the graduation rates must be made available to prospective and enrolled students on each institution's website, institutions are not required to report this information to the Department.

Given the relatively small populations of Pell Grant recipients at individual institutions, the impact of incomplete and inaccurate reporting, as discussed above, could be significant for some institutions when calculating institution-level graduation rates. Additionally the Department has not yet determined how to address transfer students in the completion rate calculation. It is unclear which institution should receive the benefit of any completion, or failure to complete, in the case of a transfer student. For example, a community college that educated a Pell Grant student in the first two years of her undergraduate program and after which the student transferred to and graduated from a four-year institution may not currently receive completion credit for that student. Incorporating transfer students in any completion rate calculation is an issue that remains unaddressed for the purposes of this report.

The Department has begun to address these problems by requiring accurate enrollment reporting through a series of Dear Colleague Letters, as well as through training sessions at the FSA Training Conferences and in online guidance for Title IV institutions. However, until the results of those efforts improve the accuracy of data reported in NSLDS, we feel it would be inappropriate to publish graduation rates at the institution level using currently available Department data.

In addition, the Institute for Education Sciences has announced new data collection efforts that will better capture transfer students and other non-first-time, full-time students as part of the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS). Institutions will begin reporting graduation data for these students to IPEDS in the 2015-16 academic year.<sup>5</sup>

Given the limitations outlined above, we urge caution against making any inferences or generalizations about the data provided. We look forward to sharing additional data as it becomes available in the years to come.

Summary of the Results

Table 1-A: Began at a Four-Year Institution - Graduated From Any Four-Year Institution:

Table 1-A shows that, for Pell Grant recipients who began attendance at a four-year institution in 2007-2008, 38.82% graduated from any four-year institution within six years.

Table 1-B: Began at a Four-Year Institution - Graduated From Any Institution:

Table 1-B shows that, for Pell Grant recipients who began attendance at a four-year institution in 2007-2008, 44.41% graduated from any institution (four-year or less-than-four-year) within six years.

Table 2: Began at a Less-Than-Four-Year Institution - Graduated From Any Institution:

Table 2 shows that, for Pell Grant recipients who began attendance at a less-than-four-year institution in 2007-2008, 37.73% graduated from any institution (four-year or less-than-four-year) within six years.

Enrollment Information

Enrollment data for Pell Grant recipients are presented in three separate tables. Table 3-A presents the number of Pell Grant recipients and total award dollars by State for the 2012-2013 award year. Table 3-B presents the total number of 2012-2013 Pell Grant recipients and total award dollars by the type and control of the institution where the student received his or her Pell Grant. Table 3-C presents the number of 2012-2013 Pell Grant recipients and total award dollars by institution and State.

To foster transparency, the Department posts, on a quarterly basis, these and other student aid statistics on the Federal Student Aid Data Center Web site at <http://federalstudentaid.ed.gov/datacenter/schooldata.html>.

Minimizing Burden

The joint explanatory statement requested information on how the Department plans to minimize the burden on institutions of higher education in the reporting of enrollment information and improving the Department's ability to track enrollment and graduation rates for students who transfer. The Department strives to minimize burden on institutions while ensuring that they are complying with all regulatory and statutory requirements. When possible, reporting requirements are consolidated and streamlined, and redundancies are removed. For example, as noted above, following the enactment of the MAP-21 Act, the Department began advising institutions of significant changes to the NSLDS enrollment reporting process. Specifically, to minimize burden, institutions need only report each student in NSLDS once, regardless of the number of different Title IV programs from which they received funding. Moving forward the Department will continue to identify opportunities to simplify and improve data reporting processes for institutions.

Strategies to Increase Enrollment Rates and Graduation Rates for Pell Grant Recipients

The joint explanatory statement also requested information on the Department's strategies to increase enrollment rates and improve graduation rates for Pell Grant recipients. Actions taken by the Obama Administration and Congress in recent years have helped millions of families afford college. The number of students receiving Pell Grants has grown by 50 percent since 2008, to nearly nine million. The President's FY 2015 budget would raise the maximum Pell Grant award to $5,830 for the 2015-16 award year—a roughly $1,000 increase since 2008. Established in 2009, the American Opportunity Tax Credit provides up to $10,000 for four years of college tuition for millions of families. Moreover, the Administration worked with Republicans and Democrats in Congress to keep interest rates on student loans low.

Increasing Enrollment

Families also have access to better information today. Since the launch of the Department's Financial Aid Shopping Sheet, more than 2,000 institutions—enrolling almost half of all college students nationwide—have adopted this tool, which helps students compare aid packages from different institutions and understand the aid for which they qualify. In 2013, the Administration also launched the College Scorecard, an online tool which provides students and families with critical information on more than 4,000 colleges and universities. The Administration has dramatically simplified the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) through online tools, smart skip-logic, and simplification of questions and instructions, reducing the time and effort it takes for students to apply for aid, especially for students from low-income backgrounds. Earlier this year the Administration launched the FAFSA Completion Initiative, through which the Department will partner with States to enable them to provide to schools and school districts limited, yet valuable, information on student progress in completing the FAFSA. Most recently, at the White House College Opportunity Summit in January 2014, more than 100 institutions and 40 organizations, serving hundreds of thousands of students, announced commitments to expand college opportunity.

The Administration's landmark investments in Pell Grants, coupled with the creation of more generous tax credits and loan repayment options, have helped more Americans access a college education and helped slow increases in the net price that students and families pay for college. But we cannot expect federal student aid to keep pace with rising college costs indefinitely. We need systemic state and institutional reforms that address the root causes affecting college affordability, while also creating incentives to provide greater quality at a lower cost to students—a task the federal government cannot take on alone.

In August 2013, the President outlined an ambitious new agenda to combat rising college costs and make college more affordable for American families. His plan will measure college performance through a new ratings system so students and families have the information they need to select schools that provide the best value and to encourage all colleges to improve, shine a light on the most cutting-edge college practices for providing high value at low costs, and help borrowers who are struggling with their student loan debt.

Increasing Graduation Rates

Building on this agenda, the President's FY 2015 Budget outlines a plan for States, colleges, families, and the federal government to share in the responsibility of improving higher education access, affordability, and student outcomes. It would increase the federal investment in postsecondary education—while also challenging and helping States, colleges, and families to work together to slow the growth of tuition and fees. Specifically, these proposals would drive systemic postsecondary education reforms and investments in States; reward colleges for results; promote innovation; and ensure that student debt remains affordable. Key elements in the President's budget request include:

- College Opportunity and Graduation Bonus Grants: To reward colleges that successfully enroll and graduate a significant number of low- and moderate-income students on time and to encourage all institutions to improve their performance, this new program would provide an annual grant to eligible institutions based on the number of Pell Grant recipients who graduate on time. This new initiative would support innovations, interventions, and reforms to further increase college access and success, such as providing additional need-based financial aid, enhancing academic and student support services, and implementing technology-based or other accelerated learning opportunities.
- State Higher Education Performance Fund: These competitive state grants would encourage systemic efforts to make higher education more affordable and increase college access and success, particularly for low-income students. State grantees would adopt strategic higher education reform policies and provide federal and State resources to public colleges and universities based on performance. State policies would promote alignment with the K-12 system; ensure seamless transitions to higher education for all students; and empower students and families with clear, relevant information to help them select a college or university. Funds could be used to support and scale up effective and innovative practices that improve access and success at public colleges and universities while reducing cost per degree. States would receive up to four years of funding, and would match their federal grants, dollar-for-dollar, for a total of $8 billion in four years.
- Increasing the maximum Pell Grant award: A crucial source of support that helps 9 million low-income and middle-class students access and afford higher education, the maximum award under the Pell Grant program would increase to $5,830.
- Reforming the Pell Grant Program: The President's budget proposes to make two small, but important, reforms to the Pell Grant program. First, it would strengthen academic progress requirements to encourage students to complete their studies on time. Second, it would reinstate the Ability-to-Benefit provision for students enrolled in eligible career pathways programs, which will allow adults without a high school diploma to gain the knowledge and skills they need to secure a good job.
- Reforming Campus-Based Aid: The President's budget also proposes revising the current allocation formulas for Federal Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants and Federal Work-Study to reward institutions that enroll and graduate higher numbers of Pell-eligible students, and offer an affordable and quality education such that graduates can repay their educational debt.

- Expanding and modernizing the Federal Perkins Loan Program: The Budget would provide $8.5 billion in new loan volume annually—eight and a half times the current Perkins volume—to support Perkins Loans at up to 2,700 additional postsecondary education institutions, thereby providing more students who may need additional financing options with increased access to affordable loan funds that carry important protections and benefits. Lending authority would be allocated to institutions based on their record in enrolling and graduating higher numbers of Pell-eligible students, and offering an affordable and quality education such that graduates can repay their educational debt. Savings from the new program would be reinvested in the Pell Grant Program to help maintain or increase the maximum Pell award.
- First in the World: In FY 2014 the Department awarded $75 million in grants to 24 colleges and universities under the First in the World program. These grants will fund and support the implementation of innovative strategies and practices shown to be effective in improving educational outcomes and making college more affordable for students, particularly for low-income students. The President has proposed building on these efforts with $100 million in new grants to institutions in FY 2015.
- College Success Grants: This new competitive program would support the implementation of sustainable strategies, processes, and tools, including those based on technology upgrades, to reduce costs and improve outcomes for students. Grants would go to Historically Black Colleges and Universities and other Minority-Serving Institutions. Funded activities could include partnering with school districts and schools to provide college recruitment, awareness, and preparation activities; establishing high-quality dual-enrollment programs that allow students to earn college credit while still in high school; providing comprehensive student support services; and reducing the need for remedial education.

I hope that this report on the Federal Pell Grant Program will be a useful resource to you and your staff. Should you have any questions about this report, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Lloyd Horwich
Acting Assistant Secretary
